

“What Inspires you?”

A series of street interviews aiming to unlock the secrets to authentic inspiration.

Image 1:

- 1: “I’m inspired by food. I always look to food to relate to everything. It’s something we interact with everyday.”
- 2: “Nature. I’m doing my senior capstone next semester and I’m just thinking a lot about the politics of nature.”
- 3: “Something that inspires me is my friends.” “I think they’re super cool.”

Image 2:

- 1: “My grandmother who was an architect, and then today in this very digital world I wouldn’t say AI inspires me but it definitely changes my views on design.”
- 2: “I guess just seeing everything around me and the different cultures around me. Also AI now is so automated and comparing that to more handmade goods I want to move towards more handmade goods.”

Image 3:

“I’m inspired by my cats and my dogs and my mom.”

Image 4:

- 1: “My existential angst is what inspires me.”
- 2: “When I think about artists is what gets me going.”

Image 5:

“I think what gets me going is probably where I come from and my family and a lot of memories whether they be dreams or ancestral memories.”

Not Pictured:

“Right now I’m being inspired by the disappearing environments we just hit our first climate tipping point its very scary to see and I’m hoping to consider sustainability ethics and see how that can be translate into clothing through leather goods.”

“I think several things, first of all being in New York and also I take a lot of inspiration from the people around me like friends and family.”

“I think curiosity and doing research. Also my friends.”

“Im very inspired right now by vampires and death.”
